

Bjorn Knollmann received a MD from the University of Cincinnati and a PhD in Pharmacology from Georgetown University. He is board-certified in Internal Medicine and Clinical Pharmacology. Dr. Knollmann currently is Professor of Medicine and Pharmacology at Vanderbilt University School of Medicine, Nashville, Tennessee, USA. He holds the William Stokes Chair of Experimental Therapeutics and directs the Clinical Pharmacology Fellowship and the Vanderbilt Center for Arrhythmia Research and Therapeutics (VanCART) at the Vanderbilt University Medical Center. He is also editor of The Goodman & Gilman's Pharmacological Basis of Therapeutics textbook of Pharmacology. His research is focused on studying molecular mechanism and new treatments for atrial and ventricular arrhythmia and sudden cardiac death.